We ordered pig feed from a new firm, gave them address, post code and tel. no if they had problems. This was before sat nav was that common. We were expecting him mid morning but got a phone call from the driver at 8.30am, saying he was at the bottom of the drive and how to proceed ? Looked out the window but couldn't see any lorry. Asked him if he was sure it was the right drive ? Oh, yes, he used it every day - it was the factory drive, about a hundred miles away. 🤔

Now, should he turn left to Nurdley or right to Nutley ? Nutley was a good road, but school traffic often held him up. I hadn't a clue where these places were but told him just to head south which seemed to cause confusion. I had a brainwave, we were roughly south east of him, so told him to keep driving towards the sun which he thought was t' brilliant idea until pickle factory got in t' way....

I had twenty minutes of this before he reckoned he knew where he was going. we were desperate for feed otherwise I might have said something I later regretted. Several calls later he turned up.

Seem to remember he was a nice chap, first day on the job and couldn't thank me enough for helping him as he knew how to get here next time, like 🤔

We never used that firm again.

Shropshire, where time stands still and life is never simple.
